1. The election of Group I, claims 1-11 and 22-24, is acknowledged. Claims 12-21 are withdrawn from consideration.

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 10-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

4. Claim 10 is not clearly written and not understood with respect to “chip is using multifunctional self-aligned gate process.” Claim 11 is indefinite due to the language “capable of providing higher RF yields” since this a relative limitation and it is not clear what it is relative to.

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

6. Claims 1, 2, 6-9, 11, and 22-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Fassett et al.

Fassett et al disclose the claimed transmitter chip comprising a phase shifter polarization switch 18a-n for use in a phased array antenna wherein the phase shifter polarization switch is controlled by a beam steering computer which provides the control for the directional scanning and the polarization control, see Figure 1. Figures 2 and 4 show the series connection of phase shifters including 110, 112 for controlling scan angle and linear polarization while phase shifters

114, 120 control the circular polarization. The control means comprising a serial-to-parallel converter is deemed to be suggested in view of the fact that a single line is shown coupling the control signal from the beam steering computer to the switch and the switch comprises a plurality of required control signals for application to the separate phase shifter bits.

7. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

8. Claims 3-5, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fassett et al.

Fassett et al teach the subject matter substantially as claimed but fails to specify all of the specifics of the claimed subject matter. However, in view of the use of the phase shifter and polarization switch in a phased array antenna, the various limitations are deemed to be obvious design characteristics dependent upon the accuracy of the intended operation including the resolution of the phase shifting capability down to 5.625 degrees, the requirement for amplification and attenuation control. Use of TTL in circuit design is conventional and does not represent any novelty in the art of antenna array control.
